BRITISH PRIVILEGES.

ONE of the most striking indications of revolution in English opinion is to be found in the tone adopted by a large proportion of the home press as regards the privileges attached to British citizenship. Unding, on Thursday, the 6th instant, at 8 It is the more remarkable as it appears to be of purely modern growth, and not For Bangkok.—Per Magdalena, To-mor- the result of that modifying influence which time usually exerts over national character and habits, and we for this reason term it a "revolution." It regards a point upon which, but a few years back, Englishmen were pre-eminently sensitive, upon which journalists essayed in glowing prose, upon which public speakers dilated amidst universal applause, and which was not merely a sentiment to be aired in public, or to be flung in the faces of half-detesting, half-envious foreigners but one which each Briton or at least all above the lowest, held in his heart of hearts to be one of the prime causes of England's supremacy. There is scarcely the Public Gardens on Tuesday, the 4th: a single reader who cannot remember the old connection between "Lord Palmerston's policy" and the "Civis Romanu sum" (altered for British use) which was cometimes offensively and sometimes justly asserted by Englishmen residing or travelling at the extreme bounds of British influence. They can recollect the days when a threat of appealing to Lord Palmerston on the part of an aggrieved Briton provoked a graver feeling than that of supercilious indifference on the part of small continental officials. (thanks to the "Peace party" school) we have lived to see a change so radical, a withdrawal of government protection, to all who claimed the birthright of English men, so complete, that the very journals and the very speakers once so eloquent and forcible in support of the old theory -and practice are now amongst the houses in the docks at Leith. Cart after foremost to denounce in strong language | cart left the docks on Monday and Tuesday articles in which a grudging support to the Abyssinian Expedition is given by some of the leading journals of the British metropolis. Better we think the traitorous opposition of the Morning Star and the inleffable humbug of the Peace school than the moral obliquity thus displayed. We feel aggrieved too at reading that to talk of small matters we are not bound to take any steps for vindicating national honor in such matters as the Corean outrage, or the Kewkiang affair And to cap a long list of similar matters far too extensive to particularise in these columns, we cannot help feeling indignant at the new cry that Great Britain has no manner of "call" to care whether Dr Livingstone be alive or dead. The same spirit shews itself now-a-days everywhere. and a too zealous official who attempts. to vindicate "prestige" stands a remark. ably good chance of being "sat upon" by his superiors. The worst of it is that the arguments adduced in favor of " peace" and non-interference are almost unanswerable. But we suspect that had leading articles existed at the time of the Crusades, most cogent reasons, equally unanswerable, would have been found why they should not have been undertaken; The fact is that a sympathy with what we may term (as formerly) the "Palmerstonian Policy" arises from a generous instinct which, though it will actually not bear the test of rigid rule or moral argument, has been fruitful in effects which have more than aught else tended to the progressive civilization of the human race. We are afraid that we must yield to argument while we should withhold by sentiment much that is now asserted as regards our western policy. To neither the one or the other do we admit that equally valid reasons exist for a policy of pure conciliation in the far East, and it is no slight satisfaction to know that from one extremity to the other of the foreign settlements in this part of the world similar views are held alike by British officials, merchants, professional men and British residents in general.

THE following official notification, possessing unusual general interest, is inserted hereunder, instead of in the column ordinarily devoted to such documents. The telegram is given verbatim, and we. for the present, leave the nunctuation and interpretation thereof to our readers discretion :-

Unbappily, that was not the whole result. Upwards of 40 innoceut people-men, women, and children of all ages were injured more or less severely by this modern Gunpowder Plot, of whom one was killed on the spot, two have since died, and the fourth is not expected to survive. Thirty-six of the sufferers were removed St. Bartholomew's Hospital, where three died in the course of the evening, and six to the Royal Free Hospital in Gray's-inn road. Three or four of the wounded were members of the same family, some were mere infants, and the husband of a woman who has since died of injuries she sustained lies in St. Bartholomow's shockingly bruis ed and prostrated. Others are missing The explosion, which sounded like a di charge of artillery, occurred at four o'clock in the afternoon, and was heard for miles round. In the immediate neighbourhood it produced the greatest consternation, for blew down houses and shattered the windows of others in all directions. The scene of the explosion is Corporation-row, which runs parallel with the prison wall on its northern side, and consisted of houses three stories high. A very circumstancial account of the transaction is given by an intelligent little boy named John Abbott. 13 years of age, who happened to be an eye witness, and who now lies at St. Barthele mew's Hospital, but happily not much injured. The boy lived with his parent at 5, Corporation-lane, and we cannot per haps do better than give his statement in

About a quarter to four o'clock, he says he was standing at Mr Young's door, No when he saw a large barrel close to the wall of the prison, and a man leave the parrel and cross the road. Shortly after wards the man returned with a long squi in each hand. One of these he gave some boys who were playing in the street and the other he thrust into the barrel One of the boys was smoking, and he handed the man a light, which the mar applied to the squib. The man staid short time until he saw the squib begin to burn, and then he ran away. A policeman ran after him, and when the policeman arrived opposite No. 5 "the thing wen off." The boy saw no more after that, as he himself was covered with bricks and mortar. The man, he says, was dressed something like a gentleman, he had on brown overcoat and black hat, and had light hair and whiskers. He should know him again if he saw him. There was a white cloth over the barrel, which was black, and when the man returned with the squib he partially uncovered the barrel, but did not wholly remove the cloth. An alarm was at once given, and several members of the Bishopsgate-street Fire Brigade Station, which is situated exactly opposite, were immediately in attendance with three hand engines, the nature of the fire being understood however, they were not brought into requisition, but the efforts of the firemen were directed to subduing the flames by throw ing sand upon them, by which means they providentially succeeded in extinguishing the fire. MYSTERIOUS ROBBERIES. -The late theft of the Roman gem from the museum at: Shrowsbury recalls a robbery of pictures on a large scale which took place some fiveand-twenty years ago, and which served to show the difficulty which attends the sale of such ill-gotten goods. On the occasion in question some of the most valuable of the pictures in Lord Suffolk's house at Charlton, in Wiltshire, were found one morning to be missing. The frames were in their places, but the paintings were gone. The closest investigations failed to give any clue to the thiefor thieves. Workmen had been at work in the house on the day before the robbery, and of course strong suspicion attached to them, but nothing could be brought home to any one of them, and in like manuer nothing was discovered to incriminate any of the servants of the family. The pictures stolen were further so large in size that it seemed almost impossible that they could have been appropriated and carried off with the speed with which they had certainly disappeared. Then followed the question how the thieves could turn them into money without furnishing some history of their previous owners, which could not have been given without making the crime public. It was supposed, as the best guess that could be hit upon, that they had been carried abroad, either to America or to the Continent, with a view to private sale to rich men who would not be too curious as to the truth of the story with which they would be accompanied. At last all hope of discovery was given up; when several years afterwards they were found in some obscure house in London. stowed away in secrecy as still unsaleable. They had really been taken from their frames by one of the servants, of Charlton House, and cleverly hidden in the house itself, until some favourable opportunity occurred for carrying them off to London. The moral of the story was satisfactory to all owners of valuable works of art. It had been found impossible to dispose of them without revealing the theft, oven with all the machinery for selling now at the command of clever scoundrels. There is also a further moral for the benefit of the possessors of art treasures which they should weigh well-the more generally they allow their possessions to be seen by connoisseurs the more numerous will be the body of

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS & OINTMENT HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. HIS Medicine is universally admitted to be the most efficacious remedy known to the world. No preparation is so suitable to the climates of India and China as this fine and invigorating medicine. is particularly adapted to the constitution of European ladies, as it is never failing in its effects in all diseases peculiar to females, while those who are attenuated by the de bilitating effects of the above climates will tion to robust health. HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT. The science of Medicine has never before produced any remedy that can be compared to this wonderful Uintment, as it cures after all other means have failed, all wounds, sores, nleers, and also the most invoterate skin diseases peculiar to the climates of India and China: It is the true friend of the Soldier and Civilian, as certain old sores can be removed by it that cannot be conquered by any other treat-

(Singapore Free Press, May 9.) We referred briefly, several days ago, to vice to the cause to which they have given new work published by Messis. A. hort- themselves. rede & Co., of Hongkong, entitled "The Treaty Ports of China and Japen." But it would be utterly impossible, in a condensed notice of such a work, to give an adequate idea of its contents. The historical exents of interest since the foundation of the settlement of Hongkong, are perhaps too much condensed into a general summary; but the most important feature in the composition of the society of the present colony, is detailed at greater length. When we come to consider that the book before us makes no pretensions to be a history, but merely a guide book, we cannot hesitate to pronounce it at once the most complete work of its kind over issued. The Appendix may be termed the China Bradshaw, and the text teems with interesting papers, -historical, botanical, and descriptive. The maps and plans are useful illustrations of the geographical position of the treaty ports, and a valuable assistance both to travellers and residents. (N. C. Daily News, May 16.)

China and Japan," to which it forms a hitherto unoccupied place in Eastern litercomplete guide, and regarding the history ature. of which it gives interesting particulars. Maps of the various localities described are of the most interesting chapters is devoted | duction deserves at the hands of those into a sketch of the history and topographical features of Formosa. The vicissitudes of its history, the peculiarities of its inhabitants, and the reputed mineral wealth of its hills afford ample subject for research; and, to a person of Mr Swinhoe's tastes, must have China which otherwise would be lost, and "Notes on Formosa" are derived many of the particulars given in the work under review. * * * Interesting descriptions of the fauna and flora of the island are given, for details of which we refer our readers to the book itself. We have, we believe, said enough to show the scope and character of the work; and must take leave of it for the present, though with the intention of completing our sketch of the information it gives regarding the various treaty ports, on a future occasion. In the meantime, we can assure our readers that no one who takes the trouble to gain a more intimate knowledge of it, will regret the tim comployed,

From the Hankow Times, May 18. We feel it to be a public duty to take the first opportunity of cailing attention to the "Guide Book and Vade Mecum" just is sucd for "travellers, merchants, and residents in general," in the Treaty Ports of Iron and Brass Castings, either for Ships China and Japan, by Messrs Shortrede & From the Englishman (Colcuita) of June 8: or general purposes, are executed with the Co.; of Hongkong. * * * The order of Hame (100 Horse-power nominal) is always and statistics of trade are given, along with in readiness to Tow Sailing Vessels from a miscellaneous detail of facts and incident, Hongkong to the Dock free of charge, and in connection with particular localities. B.—The Consignees or Master of any and the work closes with a set of useful ap-Vessel seeing reason to complain of the work pendices. The last of these is the greatest done in the Docks, or in any way respecting novelty of the work. It consists of a bibli ographical index of all formal works pubto the compilers, entirely excluded.

We hope to see this omission repaired in the next edition. With the exception of the comparative thinness of the paper, the getting-up of the work is very creditable to all concerned; and we have sincere pleasure in congratulating the authors and publishers on the considerable merit of their admirable enterprise and performance.

Opinions of the Press.

(Hankow Times, Mar. 1867.) We insert this week, apropos of some pinection with the vexed question. * * * Such a work as the "Notes" is pecutry, and its people, language, and institutions; and we trust it will be as warmly supported as it deserves by the numerous rising and energetic men, who are now, thanks principally to the philological labours of Mr Secretary Wade, making rapid advance in the acquirement of the languages to say nothing of the devoted missionaries who have already grown grey in their ser-

Report of North China Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society.

March 1867. Two periodicals which are likely to be of great service have also been commenced one is published at Foochow and is called "The Missionary Recorder," and the other emanates from Hongkong and is called "Notes & Queries." It is intended to serve as a medium of intercommunication for persons interested in Chinese Philology, Geography or History. These indications of literary activity are perhaps the most import ant "sign of the times" thas been our province to record, for they are all means to facilitate that mutual understanding oue of the other, which seems so bard to establish between Europe and China. (Feochow Missionary Recorder, April, 1867.) The two first numbers of Notes & Queries on China and Japan have been placed on our table. The magazine is every way creditable to its editor and publishers, and A very interesting book has lately been we cannot but wish them the utmost sucpublished, entitled "The Treaty Ports of cess in their efforts to fill an important and Finologues, Chinese antiquaries and scientific men ought especially to congratulate themselves on the appearance of "Notes and Queries," as it will form their medium of communication and bring into notice what otherwise night havelain unknown and buried in themselves. Now that Law and Gilicialism have got their Gazette, Science and Philology their Notes and Queries, and Missionaries their Recorder, the various divisious of mental thought and work in this land ought to be well taken care of; for our part we are glad to see these several issues, both on account of the information and instruction they tflord, and the index they supply to the mental vigour of the foreign community in
